The Brunel50 Path was created on the map over the August Bank Holiday 2015, and was first walked through during the following month. That part was a solo effort. As soon as the news leaked out, generous help and advice came my way from many sources: I cannot list them all.

Particular thanks, though, are due to Sheila Bannerman and Norman Bonney for their valuable contributions to the history of the University and of the areas passed through on the walk. Sally Trussler and Neil Graveney provided photographs of Osterley, Twickenham and Runnymede campuses from the days when they were campuses, and Mandy Mordue and her colleagues came to the rescue in finding the Childs article from 1980.

Finally, I should like to thank the kind staff in the pharmacy in Egham who practised first aid on my leg (which had been torn by a sharp broken bough hidden in the nettles near Thorpe — on a route between Chertsey and Runnymede which I immediately discarded as impracticable), in complete contrast to the branch of the much better-known chain of pharmacies across the High Street, whose staff refused to help a visitor in distress.
